at the annual exercises at the W. R. C. monument at Woodland Cemetery in the afternoon.

The services at Woodland opened with the G. A. R. memorial by the Sons of Union Veterans, followed by the memorial to the Unknown Dead by Lewis Relief Corps, No. 29, and the American Legion memorial.

The O. S. and S. O. Home furnished vocal music after which Lincoln's Gettysburg Address was recited by Miss Faye Cavanaugh. Another musical number followed and then came Superintendent Hammerle's address. The ceremony was brought to a close with the singing of "America" by the audience, the benediction pronounced by the Rev. W. H. Tilford and the sounding of taps by Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard.

Hundreds of people lined the streets in the business section at 2:30 p. m. to view the customary parade of patriotic and civic organizations to Woodland Cemetery.

Sheriff Ohmer Tate acted as grand marshal of the parade and had as his aides, Robert Brewer, Lester Barnes and Miss Andrews. Assembling at Main and Collier Streets, the parade moved on Main St. in the following order.

Police department, Ohmer Tate, grand marshal, and aides; O. S. and S. O. Home cadet band and battalion; auto bearing Supt. Hammerle and reception committee; O. S. and S. O. Home auto; Sons of

BROTHERS DROWN

NEW CASTLE, Pa., May 31.—Walter Miller, 12, and his brother, Carl, 10, were drowned here Memorial Day when they went beyond their depth in the Shenango River.

FIRE EMPTIES THEATER

CLEVELAND, O., May 31.—Although temporarily panic stricken, 200 children marched quickly from the Columbia Theater here yesterday when fire broke out in the film room. Smoke filled the theater but order was maintained.

Mrs. Alice McLean, Cleveland, who was at first believed to be suffering from bruises and shock alone, has internal injuries which may prove fatal.

Miss Frances Fillingham, East Cleveland, is suffering from a punctured lung and serious head injuries.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 31.—Ray Anderson, 18, was injured fatally here yesterday when he fell twenty feet to the ground from the "Jack Rabbit" a speedy figure-eight concession at an amusement park. The youth and his brother and two girls had gone to the park to spend the holiday.

OLD ORCHARD, Me., May 31.—Five land-bound trans-Atlantic airmen were depending today upon those rare June days the poets tell about to supply favorable weather for their projected flights to Europe.

On this last day of May the impatient aviators of the American monoplane Green Flash and the giant French monoplane Yellow Bird were kept on the ground by renewed adverse flying conditions over the north Atlantic.

Another 24-hour postponement of the long-delayed hops was necessitated and the latest reports from Dr. James H. Kimball, New York meteorologist, contained no positive assurance that the fliers would be able to get away tomorrow.

Police were summoned by neighbors who heard Mrs. Snyder scream. She was killed with a butcher knife.

Snyder, one of the chief opponents of the Van Sweringens, said his wife and the maid quarreled yesterday when the girl refused to remain at home and prepare dinner for company that was coming.

The Snyders and their guests were forced to dine at a club and it was believed the maid had quit and would not reappear today.

When Detective Graul arrived at the house he was admitted by the maid—a young girl who speaks only broken English. He said she readily confessed.

AKRON, O., May 31.—Three persons were injured, two seriously, when a steam boiler exploded at the George Hershey farm, south of Ghent, on Memorial Day.

They were Mrs. A. R. Medford,

37, her son, Laverne, 16, and the woman's husband.

The explosion hurled fragments of steel 200 feet and ignited a bay-stack and barn.

Mrs. Medford was hurled fifteen

EARTHQUAKE CLAIMS 40 LIVES IN ARGENTINA; 100 INJURED

Buenos Aires, May 31.—The death toll taken by the most devastating earthquake felt in Argentina in years mounted to forty today, according to reports reaching here from the scene of the disaster.

More than 100 persons were reported injured, Villa Autel, in the heart of the devastated area, has been completely destroyed. Federal troops, rushed to the province from here and other centers, were patrolling the villages and aiding the relief workers.

Searching parties were organized to seek in the ruins of the villages for more bodies. Relief workers were looking after the hundreds of homeless sufferers who spent the night in the open fields and were affected physically by the exposure and mentally by the calamity.

According to reports from Mendoza, in the province of Mendoza, new tremors were felt throughout the afternoon yesterday.

A new volcano has become active in Central Mendoza, it was reported, in the vicinity of San Carlos. This volcano, according to the newspaper Razon, is 100 yards wide.

The disastrous quakes became active early yesterday morning and lasted for hours. The quakes were so terrific that they were felt for hundreds of miles around, in the provinces of Buenos Aires, Cordoba and San Luis.

TWO GANGSTERS DIE ON CHICAGO HOLIDAY

CHICAGO, May 31.—The quiet that has ruled for several weeks over gangland was shattered on Memorial Day when two gangsters were killed. However, since both men were only minor members of the hoodlum element and not allied with any of the major gang, the peace pact signed by the gang leaders recently still remains unbroken.

Thomas McGillicutty, racketeer, was shot to death in the basement of a cafe here. Police still are trying to find the murderer. McGillicutty apparently engaged in a gun battle with the man. Four bullets were found in a wall of the basement.

Dominick Costa, operator of a "sinfully cooking" outfit, was shot to death and his body carried to a suburb. No motive for his murder was learned.

HISTORIAN DIES

HILLSBORO, O., May 31.—Samuel P. Scott, 83, internationally known historian, is dead here from pneumonia. Scott was the author of numerous historical works, including "The History of Spain" and "Moorish Empire in Europe." He was a fellow of the Royal British Society of Arts, the Royal Meteorological Society and other similar organizations. Scott's parents were pioneer settlers in Columbus.

FALLS TO DEATH

YOUNGSTOWN, O., May 31.—Ray Anderson, 18, was injured fatally here yesterday when he fell twenty feet to the ground from the "Jack Rabbit" a speedy figure-eight concession at an amusement park. The youth and his brother and two girls had gone to the park to spend the holiday.

TWO DROWNED IN ACCIDENT ON LAKE

MONROE, Mich., May 31.—Two men were drowned and seven were injured in a speedboat accident on Lake Erie, off Bolles Harbor, Memorial Day.

The dead are Ransom Dull, 33, auto sales manager of Monroe, and Charles Hannemann, 45, Detroit contractor.

The injured: Joseph Eberly, 25, Richard Peters, 28, Walter Bondy, 30, John C. Dunn, 28, William Banford, all of Detroit; Ray C. Dull, 37, a brother of Ransom Dull, and Mike Lantz, 30, both of Monroe.

Hannemann went down instantly and was not seen again, while Ransom Dull held to some floating object but was so completely gone when picked up that he died within a few moments.

TWO BUS VICTIMS SERIOUSLY HURT

GENEVA, May 31.—Two Cleveland women, injured in the bus crash west of here Wednesday night when one passenger was killed, were reported in serious condition today.

Mrs. Alice McBean, Cleveland, who was at first believed to be suffering from bruises and shock alone, has internal injuries which may prove fatal.

Mrs. Frances Fillingham, East Cleveland, is suffering from a punctured lung and serious head injuries.

PRESIDENT HOOVER SOUNDS CHALLENGE TO MAINTAIN PEACE

Arlington Address Pleads For Arms Limitation

WASHINGTON, May 31.—President Hoover awaited today the response of the governments and people of the world to America's second bold challenge within a few weeks for immediate action toward effective limitation of armaments.

The president's Memorial Day address in Arlington National Cemetery, was generally hailed here as an utterance destined to mark a new milestone in the complex disarmament negotiations which have been carried on between the great powers since the World War.

"We must clothe faith and idealism with action," was the keynote of President Hoover's address.

The Kellogg pact, by which forty nations have renounced war as an instrument of national policy, has paved the way for the next great step forward.

The deepest aspirations of the American people are that peace should be established on a sound basis, removed from competitive armaments, Hoover said.

"We believe the time has come when we must know whether the pact we have signed is real, whether we are condemned to further and more extensive programs of naval construction."

Speaking within ear shot of the tomb of the unknown soldier, the chief executive solemnly warned the nation that the advances in world peace sentiment embodied in the Kellogg pact are endangered by the continued strengthening of naval arms by "every important power."

"They died," he said, throwing his voice over acres of glistening white grave markers, "that peace should be established. Our obligation is to see it maintained."

The president's address was less than fifteen hundred words in length, stripped of every oratorical flourish, it was almost epic in construction. Blunt, incisive and direct, it suggested solution in geometry.

"If this covenant be genuine proof," he said, "that the world has renounced war as an instrument of national policy, it means at once an abandonment of the aggressive use of arms by every progressive nation and becomes a sincere declaration that all armaments hereafter shall be used only for defense."

"Consequently, if we are honest we must reconsider our own naval armament and the armaments of the world in the light of their defensive and not their aggressive use."

"We are to set standards that naval strength is purely for defense and not for aggression, then the strength in fighting ships required by nations is but relative to that of other powers. All nations assent to this—that defensive needs of navies are relative. Moreover, other nations concede our contention for parity. With these principles before us our problem is to secure agreement among nations that we shall march together toward reductions in naval equipment."

Observers have noticed and commented on a striking similarity between passages in the Memorial Day address and related subject-matter in the address of Ambassador Hugh Gibson before the preparatory commission meetings at Geneva April 22, in spots the similarity suggested President Hoover had actually written the parts of the Geneva speech.

On the last day of May the impatient aviators of the American monoplane Green Flash and the gallant French monoplane Yellow Bird were kept on the ground by renewed adverse flying conditions over the north Atlantic.

Good Prison Record May Earn Freedom For "Tacks"

Cliff W. "Tacks" Latimer, Xenia, former big league baseball player and employee of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., serving a life sentence in Ohio Penitentiary on a second degree murder charge for the slaying of Charles Mackrodt, a fellow employee, at Xenia, may be pardoned by Governor Cooper, it is learned.

"Tacks" entered the penitentiary January 7, 1925. He was assigned to work for Chaplain T. O. Reed and was later made manager of the penitentiary baseball club, an honor never before accorded a prisoner, and picked a team from among his prison mates.

The nine finished second in the M. and M. League, an eight-club organization that has been in existence thirty years.

Latimer was made an honor man by Warden P. E. Thomas, and was given the job as doorman in the outer office during the day.

Mrs. Copeland returned on the 10 o'clock traction car from a visit in Dayton and alighted from the interurban in front of the county home. It is thought that she suffered a stroke as she started to cross the road and fell in the middle of the highway.

An auto, driven by W. C. Connor, 307 Telford Ave., Dayton, traveling toward Xenia at a normal rate of speed, struck her. The car was also occupied by W. B. Farmer, 116 Brown St., Dayton, and they were on their way to Hillsboro.

The autoists picked up the woman and took her to the local hospital. An examination failed to disclose any injuries due to the accident which might have caused her death.

Couson was exonerated from blame but may be questioned later, Coroner Chambliss said.

The coroner learned that Carson Pratt, Dayton, passenger on the traction, and Bert Lemon's conduct for saw she was the woman in the center of the road after leaving the traction.

The body was removed to the J. C. Johnson undertaking parlor. Mrs. Copeland is survived by her husband, John Copeland, of Winchester, Ind., and by three daughters and one son, a former marriage.

They are: Mrs. Chester Saunders and Mrs. Vera Hawkins of Chicago and Mrs. Caissa Wike of Cleveland and Sherman Wilson of New York. A sister, whom she visited Thursday, lives in Dayton. She was a member of the Zion Baptist Church. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

TEXT OF MEMORIAL ADDRESS

Following is the complete text of the Memorial Day address delivered by School Superintendent Louis Hammerle at the exercises in Woodland Cemetery Thursday: Even before the close of the Civil War the thirtieth day of May, in several of the southern states, was observed as a holiday in tribute to their soldier dead. In the North no fixed day was set apart until May 5, 1868 when General John A. Logan, then commander-in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, issued a general order designating the 30th day of May 1868, "For the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion." General Logan did this "With the hope that it will be kept up from year to year."

Our presence today, more than sixty years later, in this spot, followed as the last resting place of the mortal remains of the heroes of this community proves General Logan's hope was not in vain. In 1882 the Grand Army urged that the proper designation of May thirtieth is "Memorial Day," not "Decoration Day." Our presence today is consistent with this distinction: we come not only to decorate again with fragrant, beautiful flowers and the national colors these graves, but also to pay our heart-felt tribute to the memories of our heroes.

In 1874 Rhode Island made this day a legal holiday. By 1910 in all but ten states and territories, May thirtieth was made a legal holiday, these ten states observing other days of the year in a similar manner.

The living blue-clad veterans of the Northern Armies of 1861 would be the first among us to agree that our tributes and prayers today include the grey-clad combatants of the South. Therefore this republic pauses today as a nation in recognition of the sacrifices, the accomplishments, the character, the patriotism, of all soldiers of all wars from every farm, hamlet, village, and city.

If you walk westward from the tall inspiring Washington monument in our National Capitol, a recently constructed mirror pool lies glistening before you. As you walk along its stone enclosed edge the simple colonnaded Lincoln Memorial rises with its steps beckoning you to enter. You ascend the steps and suddenly the size of the memorial strikes you—so perfect are its proportions, so simple are its lines, you do not at first realize its extent. No doors bar your way as you enter between the high columns into the rectangular building. Directly before you sits the heroic sized statue of that hero Abraham Lincoln. He sits in the presidential chair, his lean hands grasping firmly the arms of the chair. And then you gaze into the face. Is it stubbornness you see there? Is it the stubbornness of righteous determination. In this individual met all the mighty conflicts of that day: A nation divided, pouring out its treasures of lives and gold in civil war. Through him, God himself, seemed to give to the nation its ideals and direction. Through disastrous battles, internal dissensions, personal attacks, human frailties, he guided a people back to a union of all the states—to a re-established nation.

By March 1865 a few hundreds over a million men were in the Federal armies. The armies of the Confederacy numbered 700,000 in 1863 but had probably decreased to 200,000 in March, 1865. Of these combatants, at least 300,000 were killed on each side. During the war the North spent $3,250,000,000 and the South $1,500,000,000. But by 1909 the cost of the war to the nation is estimated to have totalled $15,500,000,000—and the cost is not all yet paid. These figures give us today some small concept of the size and intensity of that struggle.

There is another side to the war only hinted at by statistics. I learned of the human side of the war as a boy sitting in the blacksmith shop of my grandfather. He had just finished fashioning from bar iron on his ringing anvil shoes for a horse. They had been nailed a war waged by this nation upon the highest principles ever known by kings of old, owes much to those we honor today. May their memory grow dearer as years go on.

Not our love of country made deeper? Are not emotions aroused when we think of the records of these sons of the United States. We here remember those whose mortal remains lie in the cemeteries of this their homeland, in those sacred spots of Europe, and in the vast reaches of the seas. We remember those in hospitals and in homes, incapacitated for lives of happiness and usefulness. The brightest page in the annals of the American Legion are those containing the records of achievement in behalf of these comrades.

You know the results of the World War. This happy prosperous nation with millions of homes enjoying luxuries undreamed of sons and husbands to the Republic.

Problems confront America today at home and abroad. We sincerely hope none will ever lead to the necessity of armed action, nor to the necessity of again laying on the altar of war the sacrifices of money and lives. May the same traits of character displayed by our wartime heroes, both men and women, be exhibited by all Americans everywhere in the amicable solution of all our difficulties. May peaceful America continue to enjoy and spread liberty, justice and equality throughout the world.

Youth cries out that the accomplishments of tomorrow shall surpass all those of yesterday. We, the living, must keep faith with the dead by our contributions to the nation. We are the makers of the flag of tomorrow.

TEXT OF MEMORIAL ADDRESS

Following is the complete text of the Memorial Day address delivered by School Superintendent Louis Hammerle at the exercises in Woodland Cemetery Thursday:

Even before the close of the Civil War the thirtieth day of May, in several of the southern states, was observed as a holiday in tribute to their soldier dead. In the North no fixed day was set apart until May 5, 1868 when General John A. Logan, then commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, issued a general order designating the 30th day of May 1868, "For the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion." General Logan did this "With the hope that it will be kept up from year to year."

Our presence today, more than sixty years later, in this spot, hallowed as the last resting place of the mortal remains of the heroes of this community proves General Logan's hope was not in vain. In 1882 the Grand Army urged that the proper designation of May thirtieth is "Memorial Day," not "Decoration Day." Our presence today is consistent with this distinction: we come not only to decorate again with fragrant, beautiful flowers and the national colors these graves, but also to pay our heart-felt tribute to the memories of our heroes.

In 1874 Rhode Island made this day a legal holiday. By 1910 in all but ten states and territories, May thirtieth was made a legal holiday. These ten states observing other days of the year in a similar manner.

The living blue-clad veterans of the Northern Armies of 1861 would be the first among us to agree that our tributes and prayers today include the grey-clad combatants of the South. Therefore this republic pauses today as a nation in recognition of the sacrifices, the accomplishments, the character, the patriotism, of all soldiers of all wars from every farm, hamlet, village, and city.

If you walk westward from the tall inspiring Washington monument in our National Capitol, a recently constructed mirror pool lies glistening before you. As you walk along its stone enclosed edge the simple colonnaded Lincoln Memorial rises with its steps beckoning you to enter. You ascend the steps and suddenly the size of the memorial strikes you so perfectly are its proportions, so simple are its lines, you do not at first realize its extent. No doors bar your way as you enter between the high columns into the rectangular building. Directly before you sits the heroic sized statue of that hero Abraham Lincoln. He sits in the presidential chair, his lean hands grasping firmly the arms of the chair. And then you gaze into the face. Is it stubbornness you see there? It is the stubbornness of righteous determination. In this individual met all the mighty conflicts of that day: a nation divided, pouring out its treasures of lives and gold in civil war. Through him, God himself, seemed to give to the nation its ideals and direction. Through disastrous battles, internal dissensions, personal attacks, human frailties, he guided a people back to a union of all the states—to a re-established nation.

In March 1865 a few hundreds over a million men were in the Federal armies. The armies of the Confederacy numbered 700,000 in 1863 but had probably decreased to 200,000 in March, 1865. Of these combatants, at least 300,000 were killed on each side. During the war the North spent $2,250,000,000 and the South $1,500,000,000. But by 1909 the cost of the war to the nation is estimated to have totalled $15,500,000,000—and the cost is not all yet paid. These figures give us today some small concept of the size and intensity of that struggle.

There is another side to the war only hinted at by statistics. I learned of the human side of the war as a boy sitting in the blacksmith shop of my grandfather. He had just finished fashioning from bar iron on his ringing anvil shoes for a horse. They had been called war waged by this nation upon the highest principles ever moving a people to warfare, today receive our tribute and honors. Our hearts are stirred, our thoughts are profuse, our patriotism is deepened as we recall the deeds of these sons of the United States. We here remember those whose mortal remains lie in the cemeteries of this, their homeland, in those sacred spots of Europe, and in the vast reaches of the seas. We remember those in hospitals and in homes, incapacitated for lives of happiness and usefulness. The brightest page in the annals of the American Legion are those containing the records of achievement in behalf of these comrades.

You know the results of the enemy cannons the company cook with frying pans clattering at his belt ran so far in the next few minutes it took him two and a half days to walk back; how his buddy, Jim, pitched forward and lay still; and then how his company was cut off from supplies for weeks, and for days lived on green corn and green apples. He never recovered physically from this experience and through the years after the war suffered silently—his sacrifice to the nation.

Never can this nation ever fully express the debt we owe the men of '61 for saving our nation. The annual exercises on this day, and as they continue in the future, are our futile attempt at expression.

The Grand Army of the Republic will never die. Its spirit goes marching on through the years. With dimmed eyes and faltering steps its members may march to day, but their spirit is as young today as ever. Through them Democracy in America had shown its ability to maintain the unity of its empire. The moral stigma of slavery has been removed; the power of the nation had made a place for itself—and yet the continuing power of the states saved the national power from a development into a centralized tyranny. And the new power of the nation by guaranteeing the restriction of government to a single nation in central North America gave security against any introduction of International relations, armament wars, and continual war taxation into the territory occupied by the United States.

Even as the soldiers of the Civil War were returning to peace time pursuits and the momentous problem of reconstruction, the elements leading to the next call to arms were active. From 1868 to 1873 a harsh war had been in progress between Cuba and Spain. Cuba in its commanding position with reference to the Gulf of Mexico and approaches to the proposed Isthmian Canal, as well as commercial relations, and its Monroe as a breeding spot for yellow fever had long been regarded as an important factor in her foreign policy. When in 1895, a Cuban revolt broke out accompanied by severe repressive measures involving grave commercial injury to the United States, war between Spain and the United States became a reality. War was declared April 21, 1898. By May, 124,776 troops had volunteered. The navy was assembled. In the 114 days of conflict the American soldier established international fame—the navy uninjured wiped out Spanish fleets, and the names of Dewey, Sampson, Merritt, Wood, Roosevelt, Wheeler, Hobson, became immortal. The navy lost one officer, seventeen men and the army twenty-nine officers and four hundred and forty men killed. Disease was the greater enemy of the service men taking a toll of 2,000 lives; 253,596 Americans were en-

This national prestige was challenged in 1917 by the Central Powers who refused to permit the United States to remain neutral. Killing our citizens, ignoring our rights, they forced peace loving America to unsheathe her sword, strip battleships for action, and send across the sea the American Expeditionary Force. The world in eighteen months was amazed at the raising and training of an army of 4,000,000, at the audacious success of our expanded navy, at the stupendous amount of materials and food provided by aroused America, and at the invincible fighting qualities of the sons of this Republic.

The

United States spent twenty-two billions of dollars and 67,813 precious lives in the World War. These men who gave their lives in by kings of old, owes much to sons and husbands to the Republic.

Problems confront America today at home and abroad. We sincerely hope none will ever lead to the necessity of armed action, nor to the necessity of again laying on the altar of war the sacrifices of money and lives. May the same traits of character displayed by our wartime heroes, both men and women, be exhibited by all Americans everywhere in the amicable solution of all our difficulties.

Women of the nation, taking active part in these crises, deserve our tributes—nurses on the battlefield ministering to the wounded, and upholding the moral of our sons. The mothers, wives, sisters, and daughters, whose ministrations are in quiet and whose suffering is in silence, are the source of the strength of the nation. Today we remember them with a smile on their faces, but with hearts breaking as they said farewells and received fatal messages of sorrow, giving their precious

Women's Clubs Council Holds Sessions

By LILIAN CAMPBELL

FROM every state in the union, and from many foreign countries, club women gathered at Swampscott, Mass., for the General Federation of Women's Clubs' biennial council meeting this week.

Mrs. John F. Sippel, president, presided over all sessions, and there were many prominent speakers, among them Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, congresswoman from Massachusetts, and his excellency, Senor Don Orestes Ferrara, ambassador from Cuba.

The keynote of the meeting was "The General Federation as It Serves the Community." It is an effort of this large body of women to raise the standards of life and living in the home.

It is due, primarily, to the Federation that housekeepers and home-makers, who have previously been listed in the United States census as having no occupation, will be listed in 1930 as "home makers." L. E. Truestell, chief statistician for population of the bureau of census of the department of commerce, explained to the club women how they can assist in census taking. Mr. R. M. Hudson, assistant director of the bureau of standards, talked on "What We Are Doing That Concerns You."

City planning being one of the first steps in community service to be studied, "Woman's Part in Community Planning" was the subject of an address given by Mr. John Nolen, town planner and fellow of the American Society of Landscape Architects, Cambridge, Mass.

The chairman of the eight major departments of work in the Federation gave brief reports, outlined plans for the future, and introduced the heads of the several divisions and committees working under them. The heads of these departments are: American citizenship, Mrs. J. C. Pearson, Marshall, Okla.; American home, Mrs. John D. Sherman, Denver, Col.; education, Dr. Aurelia Henry Reinhardt, Oakland, Cal.; fine arts, Mrs. Jo-

Poems that Live

"IF SHE BUT KNEW"

IF she but knew that I am weeping
Still for her sake,
That love and sorrow grow with keeping
Till they must break,
My heart that breaking will adore,
He hers and die;
If she might hear me once implore her,
Would she not sigh?

If she but knew that it would save me
Her voice to hear,
Saying she pitied me, forgave me,
Must she forbear?

If she were told that I was dying,
Would she be dumb?
Could she content herself with sighing?
Would she not come?

Unsightly Pimples cleared away in two weeks

Taunton, Mass.—"I have always had an unusually good complexion until a short time ago when a number of unsightly pimples appeared on my face. I tried every kind of soap I could think of, but with no satisfactory results. Then I read about Resinol Soap and Ointment, and began at once to use them. In two weeks' time my skin was as clear and smooth as ever."

(Signed) Billie Enos.

In many homes where Resinol was first used to correct skin trouble, it is now the only soap used for the toilet, bath and shampoo. Aided by Resinol Ointment it tends to keep the skin and hair naturally lovely. At all

RUPTURE!

Rupture probably is as common an affliction as any other that the human body suffers from. Infants are affected with it as well as the aged. It's probably as prevalent as eye and dental afflictions.

However, it is easy these days, even in small towns, to find good eye doctors and dentists who have devoted their whole time and energy to the betterment of rupture sufferers. It has received little attention as a specialized profession.

Unfortunately, few ruptured men and women really know where to go or what to do even find relief. It's true there are many places where trusses can be purchased, drug factories, medical supply houses, drug stores, dentists and other places. But at these places, though their intentions may be good, the men who work there have not made a study of rupture from a scientific, mechanical viewpoint. Therefore, their knowledge of your condition and the correct mechanical appliance required is very limited.

Most people know from their own experience or through their friends that when they have a set of false teeth made that it requires a number of visits to the dentist before everything is satisfactory, but most ruptured persons expect perfect results by having anyone hook a truss on them and pay no further attention to it. The patient often feels pain and fits with the correct truss once it is learned to handle the appliance and care for the ruptured and new patients absorb all this knowledge on their first visit, and in serious cases it sometimes is necessary to refit or make alterations on the appliance. Truss fitting and truss wearing is something that requires time and patience.

Most ruptured persons being ignorant of these facts, spend many dollars and induce much needless suffering. If they would consult men who are skilled in rupture treatment, the same as they do for eyes and teeth, then they would not have the horror of rupture they now have.

In buying a truss do not ask a man what kind of trusses he has.

Ask him if he knows what kind of truss you need. If he does not, ask over his rupture or what kind of employment he must seek. It's all in going to the right place with your rupture troubles.

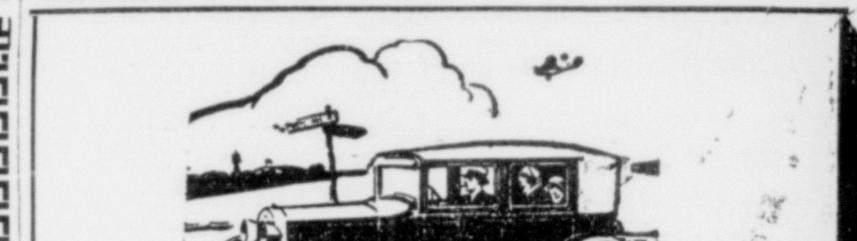

No charge for consultation or examination. Men, women, children and babies treated. Special appliances made to fit body. Apparatus made special for each case. Abdominal supports, braces, elastic hosiery and arch supports.

New Fordor Sedan is an economical car to drive

ECONOMICAL because of its low first cost, and low cost of up-keep. Economical because it has been made to stand up under thousands and thousands of miles of steady running.

An indication of the built-in quality of this car is shown in the extensive use of fine steel forgings. More steel forgings, in fact, are used in the new Ford than in almost any other car, regardless of price.

Come in and learn about the safety, comfort, smoothness and alert performance of this car by driving it yourself. You'll know it's a great automobile the minute you take the wheel.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE LORD'S JEWELS—And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him—Malachi 3:17.

T. R.'S FOOTSTEPS

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has been appointed governor of Porto Rico. Colonel Roosevelt is a son of another Theodore Roosevelt, who was also a colonel, as well as a predecessor of his illustrious son in the assistant secretaryship of the navy. The original Theodore won some of his early fame in Porto Rico during the war with Spain, then became governor of New York and, ultimately, chief executive of the United States. The younger Theodore was plodding manfully along in his father's footsteps toward Albany when Al Smith stopped him at the polls in 1924. This broke the thread of political destiny but not of family tradition. Colonel Roosevelt became "a great hunter," as his sire had done before him.

An admirer of Mr. Hoover's choice for governor of Porto Rico recently demanded that he be made governor-general of the Philippines, as "a somewhat tardy and none too generous recognition of his outstanding labors in behalf of the Republican party in New York state during the past ten years." The post he has been allotted is even less generous, although its relative inconstancy probably better suits it to one whose claims seem based so largely upon deserving partisanship. Anyway it will add another paternal title to his bag. "Governor" sounds as large in San Juan as in Albany.

The names of Colonel Roosevelt's endorsers have not been published; but there is a rumor in Washington that the credit for inducing Mr. Hoover to ignore Secretary Good in connection with the appointment belongs to Alice Roosevelt Longworth. A great father catapulted Colonel Roosevelt into the public eye. A popular and capable sister seems able to keep him there.

ENDING RIDICULOUS CEREMONY

President Hoover has done what some president ought to have done long ago as a matter of self-preservation, and has cut down the task of hand-shaking the public to one-half hour a week. This is practically an irreducible minimum unless the practice of pumphandling the public paw is to be abolished completely, which would be a good move, but possibly impractical for the moment. For if the whole right of intrusion on the time, strength and privacy of the chief executive were denied the public all at once, somebody would be sure to talk about exclusiveness, high-hattedness, and so forth and so on. There is hope that the end is in sight, nevertheless. We say "hope" because the hand-shaking ceremony as it exists is about as ridiculous and purposeless as the old royal custom of feet washing. We hope that Mr. Hoover will have the nerve to relegate it quietly to the limbo of things forgotten before his term comes to an end.

By JAMES J. DAVIS
Secretary of Labor.

James J. Davis was born in Tredegar, South Wales, Oct. 27, 1873. He was educated in the public schools and later took a business course for several months. He holds honorary degrees from two American universities. He came to the United States with his parents in 1881 and began working as a pugil's assistant in an iron works at Sharon, Pa., and later in Pittsburgh. He moved to Elwood, Ind., in 1893 and worked in steel and tin plate mills there. He was elected director general of the Loyal Order of Moose in 1906 and was appointed secretary of labor in 1921. He founded the Mooseheart Home and School of Mooseheart, Ill.

Down here on the Mexican border some folks still believe in unrestricted immigration, and the secretary of labor is criticized at times for taking the other point of view. The argument that I find emanating from some people is that such labor is cheap labor.

In all the history of the world, cheap labor has never been profitable. When labor is poor, all others are poor. If this were not true, here would not be today a great army of people, probably 50,000,000, waiting in other countries of the world to come here.

And if that movement would ever start and we would permit it to go on, there would be double that number trying to find their way here, until it would stop of its own accord, because our country would soon be in the same condition as the rest of the world.

Under the present quota law there can be admitted annually from each country a number equal to 2 per cent of the native born from such country who were resident in the United States in 1890. My theory on the problem along the border has been that, while it may be 2 per cent for Europe, we could establish a quota of 10 per cent for border countries. At the present it is 2 per cent for Europe and open immigration both on the northern and southern borders.

We surely would have the right, without violating the "favored-nation" clause of our treaties, to give 10 per cent to the borders and then allow a certain number, such as 10,000, to begin with, for a couple of years, to be brought in by the secretary of labor to the farms where they are needed to do the work, provided like labor cannot be found in this section of the country.

We have got all the poor that we need in America now. Our business is to raise the standard of living. Let us all pull together, whether we are in Texas or in Pennsylvania, to raise our standard and help raise the standard of the world, and refuse under any consideration to let the rest of the world pull us down to their standard.

Population means nothing if we are to live as the Chinese peasants live. Population means nothing if we are to live as the Russian peasants live. Population means nothing if we are to live as the Chinese peasants live. Population means nothing if we are to live as the Russian peasants live.

How to Achieve Beauty

On planning your costume with

and other smaller accessories than for her dress or suit.

Because she has her clothes made so that they will perfectly fit her tiny figure, she is able to have the most fashionable and becoming style and material for a comparatively low cost. Then she indulges her fancy and depletes her pocketbook in choosing her accessories.

"There can be no economy in hats or shoes," says she, and proceeds to prove the truth of this assertion.

But actually, her expenditure for accessories is not extravagant. For usually the same group may be worn with several costumes. Black hat, shoes and bag; beige hat, shoes and bag, blue hat, shoes and bag, alternate with street costumes of several colors. As do her costume jewels and scarfs, of harmonizing shades.

Stockings and gloves she keeps in neutral skin tones, matching each other perfectly, so that they may be worn with almost any ensemble.

Her evening wraps she keeps neutral in color, one in black, another in gold, so that they may be worn with any dress. And since she wears all black and all white a great deal in the evening, she is able to vary her costume by means of colorful accents.

Not that there is any mystery as to the delay. The unanimous verdict is that the president had hard work finding the appointees he wanted, who would accept appointment elsewhere.

"It will be a big disadvantage to the commission to have to begin by introducing itself, for the most part," the capital's general criticism.

Another criticism is that it was not announced promptly enough that President Hoover waited too long after his inauguration before making his selections—thereby letting popular interest ooze out—an interest which it may be heard to revive, especially with a commission mainly of nonentities, nationally speaking.

On planning your costume with an eye to smartness, you considered first the importance of line, then material, then color. And now, getting down to the smaller details, you come to accessories. And last, are by no means least.

In fact, accessories today have reached such a height of importance that they can completely make or mar the success of a costume. In the widest sense of the word, you see, accessories may be taken to include hats, shoes, gloves, hose, handbag, scarf and jewels.

I know a woman who perfectly appreciates the importance of the right accessories, and who never fails to present a smart appearance.

She is an American by birth, who has lived in Paris for years. And with the delightful charm and good taste of the English-American type she combines the unfailing chic of the French in dress.

She is not a woman of great wealth—in fact her income is much smaller than many of her friends would ever believe—yet she is always perfectly costumed in a way that is smart and becoming.

She has one rule which she invariably follows in making up a costume, especially at times when she is endeavoring to economize. It is to spend more for her hat, shoes and other smaller accessories than for her dress or suit.

Because she has her clothes made so that they will perfectly fit her tiny figure, she is able to have the most fashionable and becoming style and material for a comparatively low cost. Then she indulges her fancy and depletes her pocketbook in choosing her accessories.

"There can be no economy in hats or shoes," says she, and proceeds to prove the truth of this assertion.

But actually, her expenditure for accessories is not extravagant. For usually the same group may be worn with several costumes. Black hat, shoes and bag; beige hat, shoes and bag, blue hat, shoes and bag; alternate with street costumes of several colors. As do her costume jewels and scarfs, of harmonizing shades.

Stockings and gloves she keeps in neutral skin tones, matching each other perfectly, so that they may be worn with almost any ensemble.

Her evening wraps she keeps neutral in color, one in black, another in gold, so that they may be worn with any dress. And since she wears all black and all white a great deal in the evening, she is able to vary her costume by means of colorful accents.

She is not a woman who forgoes beauty for economy.

NINETEENTH HOLE BANNED AT TOURNEY PLANNED IN OMAHA

OMAHA, Neb., May 3.—There will be no nineteenth hole at Omaha Field Club during the Trans-Mississippi golf tournament, June 24-29, Blaine Young, secretary-treasurer of the association declared here.

According to Young there is no cause for specific orders against infringing on the Volstead Act because liquor is barred at the club.

"There is very seldom any drinking at tournaments," Young said. "Players have found that alcohol and good golf do not mix."

More than 300 of the best amateur golfers of the West have signified intention of entering the tournament, Young said. They come from clubs between the Mississippi river and the Pacific coast.

Minneapolis; St. Paul; Kansas City; St. Louis; Des Moines; Omaha; Denver; Colorado Springs; Amarillo, Tex.; Albuquerque, N. M.; Columbia, Mo.; Dallas, Tex.; Duluth, Minn.; Fort Worth, Tex.; Laramie, Colo.; Lincoln, Neb.; Los Angeles; Mount Vernon, Ill.; New Orleans; Normandy, Mo.; Oklahoma City; Ottumwa, Ia.; Pueblo, Colo.; Quincy, Ill.; Rock Island, Ill.; St. Joseph, Mo.; San Antonio, Tex.; Sioux City, Ia.; Tulsa, Okla.; Wichita Falls, Tex.; Topeka, Kan.; and Willmar, Minn., clubs are members of the association and each is expected to have one or more entries.

It will be the twenty-ninth annual tournament. Walter Bartlett of Ottumwa, who won the title last year and several other ex-champions will try to repeat.

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. ELIZABETH HILLER, WELL KNOWN XENIAN

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Hiller, 64, died at the home of Mrs. Charles Babb, E. Church St., at 10:15 o'clock Thursday night. She had been made an invalid by a paralytic stroke four years ago and since last October I had made her home at the Babb residence.

Mrs. Hiller was born January 13, 1865 in Knox County, the daughter of Hiram and Angeline McDonald.

She was married at Columbus September 15, 1887 to Andrew J. Hiller, who for many years was in business in Xenia and who preceded her in death October 31, 1917. For many years he and Mrs. Hiller conducted the Famous Cheap Store on S. Detroit St.

Mrs. Hiller was a member of the First M. E. Church and both she and her husband were members of the local Order of Eastern Star. Mrs. Hiller being made a life member in 1925.

She is survived by a brother, Alexander Delano McDonald, W. Linwood Ave., Maple Shade, N. J., and a sister-in-law, Mrs. Lena Liggett, Akron, O.

Funeral services will be conducted at the home of Mrs. Babb at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon in charge of Rev. W. N. Shank, pastor of the First M. E. Church with interment in Woodland Cemetery. Friends may call after 7 o'clock Friday evening.

MEMORIAL SERVICE HELD THURSDAY IN OLD BURIAL GROUND

W. W. Galloway, commander of the Wallace Anderson Post of the American Legion, of Cedarville, delivered the Memorial Day address at the Old Massies Creek Cemetery, Thursday afternoon. The program was in charge of the Cedar Cliff Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Cedarville.

The meeting was presided over by the regent, Mrs. Charles H. Ervin.

Lieut Leclade Marke, chaplain, U. S. N. was present and gave Lincoln's Gettysburg Address. Edwin Galloway and T. V. Iliff gave short talks. After the salute and taps were sounded the committees decorated the graves of soldiers. There were fifty-one graves.

Much thanks was given John Ray for his help in finding the graves of the soldiers which were not marked. At the close of the program a committee composed of John Ray, Edwin Galloway, Mrs. Charles H. Ervin, Frank Byrd and T. D. Kyle, met with the trustees and discussed the re-claiming of the cemetery; and the new entrance which is to be used throughout the year. The markers for the graves are being furnished by Foody Post, American Legion, of Xenia.

VACATIONS SOON

Summer vacations for pupils of the O. S. and S. O. Home are expected to be authorized by the Home board of trustees which will hold its monthly meeting at the institution Saturday night. Many pupils will leave the Home about June 7, returning when school reconvenes next September 3.

Youngest New York Banker Builds 64-Story Structure

New Home of Bank Will Be Second Largest In Country

Everyone thought when the plans were made for the Chicago garment mart, to be completed next year, called for a 75-story structure, that many a year would pass before there would be another to even approach that height.

Imagine the surprise, then, that greets the announcement by 34-year-old George L. Ohrstrom that he heads a syndicate which will build a new home for the Bank of Manhattan, to be 64 stories high, just 44 feet higher than the Woolworth Building, present Metropolitan title-holder.

This enterprising young man was a student of University of Michigan Law School when the United States entered the war, and today is president of G. L. Ohrstrom & Co., prominent firm of investment bankers.

After the completion of the building, which is expected to cost $20,000,000, the Woolworth Building, now under construction.

long a curiosity for rubber-necks, will be left entirely out in the cold. What is more, it will tower above Wall Street about 840 feet, and will be 36 feet higher than the Chrysler Building, now under construction.

ble, and was unable to get any relief. I became worse, and as the years passed I came to the belief that there was no help for me. Gas and bloating followed every meal, and at times I feared my heart would cease to beat. Pains pierced my back, constantly, and my kidneys got me up time after time at night.

"A number of friends urged me to try Konjola, and five dollars spent for this new medicine brought me thousands of dollars worth of health. AUTOIST HURT WHEN CAR COLLIDES WITH TRACTION IN XENIA

Harrison Rogers, Columbus, was treated at McClellan Hospital for body bruises suffered in a collision between a touring car driven by Alfred Dillard, S. Galloway St., and a Springfield and Xenia Railway Co. traction car at Detroit and Church Sts., Thursday afternoon at 4:50 o'clock.

The accident occurred when Dillard, driving off of E. Church St., onto Detroit St., failed to notice the traction car in time, witnesses said. The driver applied the brakes but the machine skidded into the interurban, which was approaching the Xenia terminal.

The impact threatened to toss Rogers, riding in the front seat, out of the auto under the wheels of the traction, but Dillard grasped his trousers and saved him from possible more serious injury. An examination at the hospital disclosed no broken bones.

The right front wheel, fender and the bumper of the auto were smashed.

Three small children, occupants of the rear seat, escaped injury. Rogers was visiting Dillard.

John Krise, this city, was motorman, and William Holland was conductor on the traction.

FRANKLIN PRATT, AGED RESIDENT OF COUNTY, IS CALLED

Following a ten-day illness, Franklin Pratt, 88, Civil War veteran, father of Carson Pratt, chief deputy under Sheriff Robert M. Blank, of Montgomery County, died at his home in Spring Valley at 5:45 p.m. Thursday on the day when the nation paused to pay homage to veterans of all wars. Death was due to complications of diseases.

Mr. Pratt was born in Waynesville, Warren County, October 20, 1840 but had lived in Spring Valley and vicinity nearly all his life. He was a retired farmer.

He enlisted in the Northern army in the Civil War in 1861 and after being wounded was mustered from the service in 1864. He was a member of Company B, 74th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and of the G.A.R.

Mr. Pratt was married in 1865 to Mary Elizabeth Smith, who preceded him in death about eleven years ago.

Surviving are three sons, Edward, Xenia; Carson, Dayton, and Calvin, a postal clerk in the Dayton post office; a sister, Mrs. Mary Jones, Waynesville; two brothers, George Pratt, Waynesville, and Ezekiel, Dayton; three grand children and four great grandchildren. Another son, William, died twelve years ago. Funeral services will be held at the home at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon with interment in Spring Valley Cemetery.

MEMORIAL DAY SERVICE

Very early after noon, Thursday the crowds began to gather on the lawns of East High and Lincoln schools. The various companies formed themselves, led by the R. O. T. C. band of Wilberforce University and preceded the line of march to Cherry Grove Cemetery. Arriving at the cemetery, the Rev. A. L. Dooley took charge of affairs as master of ceremonies. Prayers were offered by the Rev. A. J. Whitfield, chaplain of John Roan Post, No. 517 American Legion, the first speaker, Mr. W. E. Johnson of Wilberforce took occasion in his stirring patriotic talk to praise the civilians for their great services in caring not only for the soldier but the needs at home as well. The Rev. A. R. Fox, pastor of the St. John's A. M. E. Church spoke of the contribution of the ministry and the churches. He said in the various wars the ministry had played its part and the church had always thrown open her doors. They realize right is right because God is right, he said. "America" was sung by a chorus of girls. The principal speaker, Lieut. Herman Warrick of Wilberforce, eulogized the soldier in the various wars and closed with words from the Gettysburg oration. Only two of the Civil War veterans could be present, David Lee and L. P. Hilliard. Due honor was paid Mrs. Arminie Young as a gold star mother and mother of a senior soldier, Col. Charles Young.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ross and sons of Troy, O., were visitors here Thursday.

Mrs. Mary Gregory of Springfield, O., was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Hilliard, Wednesday. She was enroute to Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Alenzo Ware of Hillsboro, were guests of relatives and friends. They attended memorial services at Cherry Grove Cemetery Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Preston Howard, of Cleveland are guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Johnson, E. Market St.

Mrs. Callie Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Hays and Mrs. Ella Sanders of Chicago are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cosby and other relatives.

Mrs. R. M. Penelton, E. Church St., was called to Detroit, on account of the death of her aunt.

Mrs. Florence Robinson, of Columbus, has been the guest of her mother, Mrs. Julia Evans, E. Market St., and other relatives for a few days.

Mrs. Carrie Jackson and daughter Willa Holmes left Wednesday for Salisbury, N. C., to be the guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson. Mr. and Mrs. William Bryant of Cincinnati, were visitors of Mr. William Tibbs and grandmother, Mrs. Betty Ballard, E. Main St.

Mr. William Jackson of Cincinnati, O., is visiting with friends here and also attended the memorial services Thursday.

The Rev. and Mrs. H. O. Mason and twin girls Irene and Corene, have returned to their home in Sandusky, having attended the commencement exercises of East High School and were Sunday visitors in Piqua. The Rev. Mr. Mason took part in the installation services of the Rev. Gipson, newly elected pastor to the Park Ave. Baptist Church, Piqua. The Rev. Mr. Mason is a former teacher in the schools here. He has the plans for building a new church edifice in Sandusky where he is now pastoring.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lockett of Springfield were dinner guests Thursday of Mrs. Bertha Booth and daughter Zelma, Williams Ave.

Mrs. Ida Johnson of Chicago is the guest of Miss Eva Leach, E. Main St., and is also visiting her grandchildren Ida and Alfred Leach.

Disproves Popular Theory

Graustein's case is strongly at variance with the modern tendency to scoff at precociousness, the thought being that persons who are exceptionally bright when young rarely amount to anything. He was decidedly a youthful wonder, but today, at 43, he is head of a $600,000,000 company, and is hailed as the new genius of the power interests.

Graustein is the son of an immigrant who came to this country from a village on the Vistula river in Poland at 12, and built up a milk business in and around Boston. The elder Graustein helped Archibald in every possible way, and the boy did his part. He finished the four-year Harvard college course in two years, being graduated magna cum laude, with the coveted John Harvard Scholarship and a Phi Beta Kappa key.

Continues Speedy Rise

At 21, an age at which most college graduates are considered lucky to be entering professional school, Graustein was graduated from Harvard Law school, top man in his class. He went to work for the oldest-established law firm of Ropes, Gray, Boyden and Perkins, of which the noted Roland W. Boyden is a member. At 25 he became a partner, this being perhaps the most astonishing of all his accomplishments. To anybody who realizes what it means for an "outsider" to break into one of Boston's old law firms, it furnishes a gauge of the man's worth.

He always was a prodigious worker, with almost no outside interest. He frequently worked straight through a twenty-four hour day, and to quit work at 3 in the morning was quitting early.

The Theater

The hot weather prevailing while the Little Theater Guild is rehearsing to present its final offering of the year, "In The Next Room," a mystery play to be given at the Opera House June 5, recalls the advantages of an open air theater at this time of year.

One of the most charming of these in this section of the state is the Ernst Nature Theater at Western College for Women, Oxford, where Miss Mary Ballantine, of Xenia, a senior at the school, recently played an important role in the class play, "The Cradle Song," a play interpreted from the French.

The Ernst Nature Theater is built in a natural amphitheater and the audience is seated for the performances on a hill-side terraced in steps. The stage is screened on both sides by shrubbery, so that the performers making exits, are as completely obscured when they step from the stage as when they step into the wings of an indoor theater. The beauty of the surroundings enhances the performance and the blue sky forms a roof that defies the painter. The open-air feature is an inspiration to comfort that scorns the modern ventilating systems employed to make indoor theaters passably comfortable in hot weather.

The talkies have finally been launched in South America and at Sao Paulo, where the debut was made, the new sound films won instant admiration.

Apparatus is now being installed in several Rio de Janeiro theaters for the use of the outdoors. The first showing consisted of musical accompaniments for several films and a speech in Portuguese addressed to his countrymen by Sebastiano Sampayo, Brazilian consul general in New York.

Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo both have fine modern theaters and receive films from the United States shortly after they are released here. They are operated the same as in this country, that is, one feature, a comedy and sometimes a vaudeville act. In Buenos Aires, on the other hand, one may see three or four different pictures at one sitting, paying for each or buying a ticket for the whole exhibition.

A LOVE AND MYSTERY STORY

CHAPTER XLV

Between him and his pursuers was a useful ridge, which momentarily concealed him from their view, and Brown was right in believing that his rush had duped them. From where they stood, it appeared that Brown had indeed dropped into the abyss, and they paused an instant, then advanced again more slowly still.

"Well—that's saved us a bit of trouble," murmured the big man.

"E's a dumb-bell," answered the small man.

"I'll wager you ain't! Done enough killing for one day, eh?"

"Shut up!"

"Go on! Who's to hear?"

"Shut up, I tell you! You never know. And anyway," added the small man, nervously, "it wasn't killing. It was self-defense! And there was only one."

"Oh! self-defense! That's good."

"Well, so it was. That tramp set upon me when I was helping to get that girl down. I had to look after myself, didn't I? Anyway, it was Brill did it, not me. Oh, come on! I'm fed up with this game. Let's see if there's anything left of that fellow over the edge."

They resumed their way up the hill. They reached the spot where Brown had disappeared. There was no trace of the fugitive. They peered over, and stared down.

"Don't see him!" growled the big man.

"That's funny," grunted the little man.

And then a twig snapped nearby, and they looked around sharply. Brown, some ten yards off, was just trying to rear himself into an erect position.

"Ah! Got you!" cried the big man, lurching towards him.

"Don't move, you rat!" shouted the small man, leveling his revolver.

Brown was cornered, and he knew it. He remained still, a palpitating, crouching mass, till the big man reached him. Then he bounded on to his oppressor's chest. But the big man didn't mind at all. He merely turned, with Brown sticking to him like a mustard plaster and, holding him there, walked back to his companion.

"Don't shoot," ordered the big man. "Why waste bullet?"

"What are you going to do?" gasped Brown.

"We thought you'd gone over the edge last time," replied the big man. "Well, we're going to be sure you go this time!"

Brown struggled wildly. His captor gave him a blow and drew nearer the edge. On the edge he paused.

"Say good-bye to King's Cross," he exclaimed, mockingly. "You'll never see that no more!"

Brown closed his eyes. He would never see anything else any more, either. In a few moments, after a dizzy transit, King's Cross would fade into the eternal blackness out of which it had momentarily emerged for Brown's little fragment of earthly time, the beautiful girl he had followed would fade, and vanished, too, would be the green fields and the blue sky and the dancing sea and the little familiar bedroom he had cursed so strangely in the past—why had he cursed it, the wonderful, warm, comforting thing?—and the boss, and the eight-seventeen train, and pens, and fried eggs. Like a tennis ball, he would descend into Eternity. He would just drop on and on—and on and on—as he had begun to drop already. Hadn't he? Yes, of course, he was dropping. He must be dropping, because that's what happens after somebody holds you over the edge of a cliff and then lets you go. Only, it was odd. Very odd. There at the bottom was Eternity. Was that how one went out? Did something stop you? Something had undoubtedly caught Brown. And Brown was bouncing again.

Externally was a very noisy place. Now it began to descend upon him—but instead, Brown found himself.

Perhaps he had better open his eyes. Perhaps he would find he wasn't quite dead yet. He opened his eyes. The black became green. He blinked. He went on rolling. And then, all at once, he scrambled to his feet with a gasping sob.

A figure—only one—stood on the hill above him. Brown had rolled down on the kindly, gentle side, and the figure was just turning to regard him. A large, massive figure, a silhouette of impressive strength. And it was not the figure of the man who, a few moments, or three thousand long years ago, had held Brown in its ruthless arms.

"How are you feeling?" asked the jolly gentleman.

Brown burst into tears.

"I'm all right," he sobbed.

The jolly gentleman descended the hill and, putting his arm around Brown with surprising gentleness, lowered him to the ground again.

"Take it easy," advised the jolly gentleman, "and take your time."

"I tell you, I'm all right!" blubbed Brown, his eyes streaming.

"Fancy me crying like this—a grown man!"

He sobbed more loudly than ever, while the jolly gentleman patted him on the back and produced a pocket handkerchief.

"You want a sip of that," he suggested. "Just a sip—not too fast."

Brown took the flask obediently, while the jolly gentleman went on, in a most pleasantly calm voice:

"Fancy you crying, eh? My dear fellow, who wouldn't, in your place? If I were in your place, I expect I'd howl the house down!"

Brown took a sip. He began to tingle pleasantly. But, with the tingling, a sense of reality returned, and realization of things still to be discovered, still to be done.

"Where are the others?" he exclaimed suddenly.

"Do you think you can stand hearing?" replied the jolly gentleman. "Take another sip first."

Brown shook his head.

"Do you mean—" he asked, his eyes staring.

"There was no help for it," answered the jolly gentleman. "And, after all, you know, they are only where they were trying to put you. That's war, isn't it?"

"What happened?" shuddered Brown.

"I knocked the little fellow down first—I had to, or he'd have shot me—and then I had a bit of a tussle with the other chap—with you as the prize. I managed to pull you away from him, and after that

"They may even be there. You remember when I popped my head in at the window, at another rather necessary moment this afternoon?"

"Yes. And you went off again with Mr. Brill."

ficial visitation, and got in touch over the telephone with the local police. Local police are rather slow to mobilize, though so I didn't wait. I came on ahead. And, just as I arrived, Mr. Brill and a professional companion were turning in at the gate—while you and your pursuers were disappearing up the lane, I tell you I never wanted more earnestly to be in two places at once," he added, with a wry smile, "but as I couldn't halve myself, I went after you first. Glad I did! And now let's see what Mr. Brill and the professor are up to."

"Yes, that's the idea," nodded Brown.

"We met last night—or early this morning—at Newcastle, Mr. Bones," smiled the jolly gentleman, "when a certain young lady insisted on trying to pull off a difficult business single-handed—or, rather, with you as her only assistant, I saw her point—so we didn't want to butt in and scare the birds—but I didn't quite agree with her, all the same. You see, Mr. Bones—or Mr. Brown—policemen aren't quite heartless, and I didn't care to let you and Miss Marlowe run all the risk."

"You mean, you're a detective?" cried Brown, a great weight flying off his mind.

"I am Inspector Jarvis," nodded the jolly gentleman, "and if today my hair is brown instead of gray, yours, I note, is red! I came along to be handy in case any trouble arose—and, you'll agree, it was just as well I did!"

"My God, yes," muttered Brown, and then suddenly grew agitated again. "But the worst trouble's at the house," he cried. "We must go back."

"The moment you're ready," agreed the inspector.

"That's now!" declared Brown. "Look here, shall I go to the police station?"

"Not necessary," interposed Jarvis, as they began to move down the hill. "The police are already on their way."

"What? On their way to the house?"

"They may even be there. You remember when I popped my head in at the window, at another rather necessary moment this afternoon?"

"I did. And a most unpleasant companion I found him! All the while I wanted to punch his nose, but I had to keep up my role of innocence, and Mr. Brill never dreamed where little questions were leading. I hung on to him for a while, then decided that Coomer House should receive an of-

CHAPTER XLV

Between him and his pursuers was a useful ridge, which momentarily concealed him from their view, and Brown was right in believing that his ruse had duped them. From where they stood, it appeared that Brown had indeed dropped into the abyss, and they paused an instant, then advanced again more slowly still.

"Well—that's saved us a bit o' trouble," murmured the big man. "It's a dumb-bell," answered the small man. "Well, I ain't sorry."

"I'll wager you ain't! Done enough killing for one day, eh?"

"Shut up!"

"Go on! Who's to hear?"

"Shut up, I tell you! You never know."

"And anyway," added the small man, nervously, "it wasn't killing. It was self-defense! And there was only one!"

"'Oh' self-defense! That's good

"Well, so it was. That tramp set upon me when I was helping to get that girl down. I had to look after myself, didn't I? Anyway, it was Brill did it, not me. Oh, come on! I'm fed up with this game. Let's see if there's anything left of that feller over the edge."

They resumed their way up the hill. They reached the spot where Brown had disappeared. There was no trace of the fugitive. They peered over, and stared down.

"Don't see him!" growled the big man.

"That's funny," grunted the little man.

And then a twig snapped near by, and they looked around sharply. Brown, some ten yards off, was just trying to rear himself into an erect position.

"Ah! Got you!" cried the big man, lurching towards him.

"Don't move, you rat!" shouted the small man, leveling his revolver.

Brown was cornered, and he knew it. He remained still, a palpitating, crouching mass, till the big man reached him. Then he bounded on to his oppressor's chest. But the big man didn't mind at all. He merely turned, with Brown sticking to him like a mustard plaster and, holding him there, walked back to his companion.

"Don't shoot," ordered the big man. "Why waste a bullet?"

"What are you going to do?" gasped Brown.

"We thought you'd gone over the edge last time," replied the big man. "Well, we're going to be sure you go this time!"
